U.S., Bonn differ on talks with

BONN, Sept. 14 (Agencies) — Apparent differences emerged Monday between U.S. and West German thinking on arms talks with the Soviet Union, as Secretry of State Alexander Haig rounded off two days of talks

Soviets

U.S.-Soviet negotiations due to be held later this year were discussed over dinner Sunday night by Haig, chancellor Helmut Schmidt and Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, Bonn officials said.

No details were disclosed, but in a magazine article released Monday Schmidt made it clear he believed the U.S. may not need to deploy new Cruise and Pershing-2 missiles in Europe. That prospect, known as the "zero option" by supporters in Schmidt's Social Democratic Party (SPD), was rejected by Haig Sunday in a television interview, "It is sometimes very courious to debate an issue is which we are faced with some 1,000 warheads already deployed on SS-2 and other (Soviet) missile systems" he said.

But Schmidt, whose Ar Nopar a trade union monthly magazine was released ahead of publication by the government press office, said he felt the U.S. could refrain from deploying new weapons in Europe if the Soviet Union dismantles new SS-20 missiles. "So I do not rule out the zero option," he

Although Bonn officials question the prospects over negotiating such arms reductions, SPD support for the idea makes it politically important to Schmidt, who has staked his career on negotiations making progress.

A West German spokesman said the talks Sunday night had served to coordinate thinking on the arms issue prior to Haig's meeting in New York later this month with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Several demonstrations took place here to protest Haiq's visit. But none matches the giant rally Sunday in West Berlin, where 50,000 people marched in opposition to U.S. weapons policies.

Police dispersed a group of protesters Monday morning in one incident. In another three acrobats climbed to the roof of Bonn's bers hung a banner quoting "No to the General Haig visit, no to American policies." Several pacifist organizations called a demonstration under the slogan "nothing more important than peace."

In West Berlin, police said 151 policemen were injured Sunday in violent dashes with demonstrators. More than 70 protesters were also injured, mostly by police truncheons,

Aid to Israel threatens peace

TAIF, Sept. 14 (Agencies) — Saudi Arabia Monday described the new strategic cooperation plan between the United States and Israel as an obstacle to the Middle East peace process. President Ronald Reagan and Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin agreed to the plan in Washington last week.

The Saudi Press Agency (SPA) Monday quoted an official spokesman as saying the agreement was "a reassurance of the U.S. absolute support and biased policy in favor of

In the first official Saudi Arabian reaction to the plan, the spokesman said it "impedes the peace process in the Middle East," adding that it "makes Israel an American arsenal which threatens peace by force and works toward instability.

repeatedly asked the U.S. to stop "its biased military support for Israel." This support "endangers the peace of the entire region and drags it into a serious arms race as a result of Israel and the U.S. said they would work together under the plan to counter what they called Soviet "aggression" in the area. The plan will involve joint military operations.

The spokesman said the Kingdom had

51 votes can block AWACS deal WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (AP) — Senate opponents of President Ronald Reagan's proposed sale of radar planes to Saudi Arabia have exactly the 51 votes needed to block the sale, Senator Alan Cranston said Sunday.

But Reagan is fighting "very, very hard for his first major foreign policy victory and "he may be able to tip the balance the other way," said Cranston, a leading opponent of the proposed Saudi Arabian arms package.

Congress has until Oct. 30 to veto Reagan's proposed $8.5-billion sale, which includes five of the Airborne Warning and Control System (AWACS) radar planes plus other equipment. With the house likely to vote against the sale, the administration is concentrating on winning approval in the Senate, which would enable the sale to go through

Cranston said that in addition to 46 senators who have signed a letter opposing the strategic cooperation agreement," he

the sale, "some who did not sign .. nonetheless will vote against it," Cranston, the democratic senate whip, said on the ABC program Issues and Answers.

'We presently have 51 votes against and I think there are probably a dozen more who are unpredictable," said Cranston, who maintained that the sale "is a step toward reducing or perhaps ending the qualitative superiority" of Israel in the Mideast, "The president would feel wounded if he lost this, so he will work very, very hard, but there are many of us who feel its a mistake to provide that advance weaponry to the Saudis," said Cranston, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee.

He said even if Reagan succeeds in getting the sale through Congress, it would prove to be "adverse to our interests and the interests of Israel and quite possibly to peace in the Middle East.

The spokesman denied that Crown Prince Israel when he met Haig in Spain on Saturday, as claimed by State Department spokesman Dean Fischer.

He said Prince Fahd briefed Haig on Saudi Arabia's eight-point Middle East peace formula and they reviewed U.S.-Saudi relations, the Palestine question and Lebanon.

The agency quoted the same spokesman as adding that the Kingdom "appeals to the United States to take a reasonable, just and even-handed stance, stop its military support of Israel, because this runs against the Arab and Islamic states and against the interests of the United States itself." Saudi Arabia has been trying to obtain radar planes, as part of an $8.5 billion arms deal, from the United States. President Reagan was understood to be sympathetic, despite congressional opposition to the deal. Saudi Arabian officials have cautioned that a negative response by the United States to their quest for modern defensive weapons would force the Kingdom to turn to other sources for help. Other Arab countries have already attacked the plan and Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam has concluded a Fahd had discussed details of the strategic relations between the United States and tour to the Gulf to explain his country's opposition to it.

Official sources in Damascus said the five-member steadfastness and confrontation front which is opposed to the U.S.-sponsored Camp David peace effort between Egypt and Israel is scheduled to meet at summit level in

Libya on Tuesday, official sources here said. The front is made up of Syria, Libya, South Yemen, Algeria and the Palestine Liberation Organization. The sources said Syrian President Hafez Assad will fly to Libya with Abdul-Halim Khaddam, who just returned from a tour of the Arabian Gulf,

The Palestinian News Agency in Beirut said PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat will be attending the meeting.

The Gulf News Agency quoted Khaddam as telling Sheikh Zayed during a meeting in Abu Dhabi that the new cooperation pact hetween Israel and the United States" constituted a dangerous development in the Middle East region."

The agency quoted Khaddam as saying that Syria will raise the "U.S.-Israeli cooperation issue" at the next Arab summit conference, scheduled for November in Rabat,

At the United Nations, Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said Monday that the Middle East conflict was a concern of the entire international community and a danger to world peace. In his annual report to the General Assembly, which begins its new session Tuesday, he also referred to a dangerous combination of setbacks to east-west relations and several unresolved regional con-

Khamenei to run for presidency BEIRUT, Sept. 14 (AP) - Hojatoleslam

Ali Khamenei, the newly-elected secretary general of Iran's ruling Islamic Republican Party who survived an assassination attempt by a booby-trapped tape recorder in June, has signed up to run for president, officials at the Iranian interior ministry reported.

The officials, who declined to be named, told the Associated Press by telephone the 42-year-old fiery orator registered his candidacy for the October presidential elections with the interior ministry Sunday.

The three-day registration period for the third presidential elections since Avatollah Khomeini's revolution overthrew the monarchy in 1979 is due to be closed at the end of government office hours Saturday.

Other sources in Tehran reached by telephone from Beirut said Education Minister Ali-Akbar Parvaresh, Commerce minister Habibollah Asgar-Oldai and Parliament Member Ali-Akbar Velyayati had also signed up for the fortcoming race.

All three also belong to the fundamentalist IRP and their candidacy was described by the sources as a move by the ruling party to have alternative candidates in the elections in case the leading contender is assassinated.

This was the case when Parvaresh and Asgar-Oladi ran in the last election July 24. which was won by Muhammad Ali Rajai, the president who was assassinated by a firebomb along with Prime Vinister Muhammad

Bahonar on Aug. 30. If Khamenei is elected to replace Rajai, he will be the first clergyman president in Iran. Rajai and the fugitive Abolhassan Bani-Sadr the first post-revolution elected president, were both lavmen.

An Interior Ministry statement broadcast by the state-run Tehran radio said 41 aspirants have signed up for the presidential elections and that the total could climb to 45 or more before the registration deadline expires, but no names were mentioned,

The statement said the council of guardians would decide on the competency of the candidates within five days and then report to the government on who qualifies for the elections and who is disqualified.

Out of 71 candidates who signed up for the last presidential elections in July, only 14 were picked by the council. The apparent move to put dergymen in all

top posts signaled the Khomeini regime's determination to press ahead with its fundamentalist polices and establish full theocracy despite the 11-week-old guerrilla campaign by opponents who seek a more secular

CHANGING TIMES: The old Red Sea Palace Hotel was demolished in March, 1979, and now the new 270-room Red Sea Palace will open soon in its place.

New hotel sets latest building trend

By Alan Kenney

JEDDAH, Sept. 14 - It could be a symbol of the times. The 20-year-old Red Sea Palace Hotel with its 105 bedrooms was torn down in 1979 and a new, modern Red Sea Palace Hotel has taken its place.

According to David Payne, sales manager, the old Red Sea Palace was the only first class hotel in Jeddah and it was not until the late 60s and early 70s that the other first class hotels and international chain hotels started appearing.

During its tenure, the Red Sea Palace Hotel stood unchallenged by the chain hotels and maintained an 80 to 100 percent occupancy rate. The average length of stay for a guest was five to six days aithough there were a number of long-term guests who stayed for about two to three months.

However, Payne said the hotel management, Gustar Hoteliers and Restauranteurs of Zurich, Switzerland, consider that there is still plenty of business available for a good hotel, despite the present abundant stock of hotels, which has reduced occupancy rates. The cross-section of guest nationalities seems to have been very similar for the old hotel as is that of today, namely a minority of Europeans and Americans, although there was a high percentage of Japanese businessmen/ entrepreneurs in Jeddah and the rest of the Kingdom, during the 60s and 70s to promote Japanese products and services, he added.

Kabul draft plan draws protest TV silent as

NEW DELHI, Sept. 14 (R) - A military call-up which was reported to have sparked protests in Kabul has highlighted the Afghan government's prolems in building up an army to quell insurgency.

The demonstrations last week, in which seveal people were said by diplomats to have been injured, followed an official announcement last Monday ordering discharged sol-diers below the age of 35 back to the service. The protests were the most serious since about 100 conscripted policemen, incensed by the extension of their two-year tour of duty, went on the rampage in Kabul last December.

Since the tate radio announced the new call-up, trucks have toured the capital making loudspeaker appeals to ex-servicemen to enlist, Western diplomatic sources said. Street atrols have also been sepped up to check identity papers. The conscription drive is the latest of several efforts over the past year o bolster the amed forces, facing a serious nanpower shortage.

The total strenth of the armed forces when Marxist rule was established in Afghanistan in April, 1978 was around 90,000 officers and men. Since then defections, casualties and purges have depleted the Afghan Army to about 30,000.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 14 (AP) - The ruler of Kuwait, Sheikh Jabar Al Ahmad Al Jabar al Sabah, arrived here from Bucharest for an official visit to Hungary at the invitation of President Pal Losonczi.

The Kuwaiti ruler is on a four-nation East European tour that will also take him to Belgrade, capital of Yugoslavia. His first stop was Sofia, Bulgaria. Hungarian dailies carried the Sheikh's photograph and published a short biography of him. Greetings were also published in Arabic script on the front page of all dailies. To widen recruitment, the gonernment last January reduced the draft age by a year to 20 and ffered financial inducements to soldiers who stayed on after their discharge. Graduates at present serve in the army for 12 months and non-graduates for two years.

Kabut-based diplomats have reported eye-witnesses as saying security forces forcibly pick up young men even below the conscription age of 20 years to draft them into the army. But an Afghan Defense Ministry official told Kabul radio this week that there had been no forcible recruitment.

Israeli radio, staff strikes

TELAVIV, Sept. 14 (Agencies) — Israel's state radio and television networks were silenced except for news bulletins Monday as 6.000 government telecommunications technicians went on a three-day "collective vacation" to press money demands.

The communications ministry called the action a wildcat strike and threatened to dock the employees' pay. The workers say gov-ernment is refusing to pay them salary hikes promised long ago in return for increased productivity.

Meanwhile, bread price rises of about 27 percent were ordered Sunday night by the Israeli ministry of commerce and industry. The Israeli treasury also said Sunday that a series of price hikes for other items would be announced in the next few days. The increases are moves to end the subsidizing of consumers. The price of gasoline (petrol) was raised here by 15 percent recently, and tele-

Although Pakistan so far has not formally sought readmission to the association of nations who were formerly in the British empire, there has been speculation that the Commonwealth heads of governments meeting beginning Sept. 30 in Melbourne, Australia, may extend and invitation to it to rejoin. The independent newspaper said Australian Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser sounded Indian leaders about Pakistan's readmission during his short visit New Delhi Pakistan, "a bulwark against further Russian inroads," back in the Commonwealth.

Pakistan left the Commonwealth in 1972 after Britain granted diplomatic recognition to Bangladesh, formerly East Pakistan, which became independent in a civil war backed by Indian troops. The Statesman said India's position is that Pakistan quit the Commonwealth on its own and that nothing had changed since it took the decision for it to be invited to rejoin the association.

The newspaper added that some smaller Commonwealth members were unhappy that attempts were made to induct Pakistan because of that country's recent alignment wiht the United States.

of a coalition grouping that included Communists from the leftist Unionist Progressive Party (UPP), Muslim Brotherhood members and Nasserites.

Mayo said that Al-Zayyatt, in recent years a UPP supporter, held several meetings with two Soviet diplomats, providing them with information on Islamic groups and opposition politicians. The reports identified the diplomats as Evgueni Zharkov, a first secretary for cultural affairs who left Egypt last year, and First Secretary Valery Vlaxsova.

Mayo said the Kremlin wanted to topple the pro-Western Egyptian government because it was the main obstacle to Soviet control of Egypt.

The newspaper also said one of the most prominent figures arrested in this month's crackdown, journalist Muhammad Heikal, was accused of inciting sectarian strife in articles about Islamic groups. Heikal, former editor of Al Ahram and one of the most powerful men in Egypt during the rule of former President Nasser, has rarely written for the incommon is a dislike of the government. Sadat has called them as traitors. Government opponents held in previous, far smaller round-ups have usually been released after a few days' questioning. According to official statements, the questioning of the detainees has not begun and even those who may be found to have committed no offence seem to face weeks under arrest. Egyptian law allows the authorities to hold them for 60 days before starting legal proceedings.

In the past few days Sadat has also appeared anxious to refute any parallel between events here and in Iran.

As "father of the Egyptian family", Sadat savs it is his duty to save the misguided son from joining numerous societies which have now been dissolved and their leaders Cairo correspondent of the French news-paper Le Monde.

Peroncel-Hugoz, given a week to leave the country, was the second foreign journalist to be ordered out of Egypt since the crackdown. The state information department Sunday accused him of distorting facts.

The ring was part of a grand Communist scheme-using the civil strife between Christian Copts and extremist Muslims to overthrow Sadat by working with members of the opposition, the paper said. It said that behind the plot were KGB intelligence agents from Hungary and the Soviet Union.

Related to the plot was an alleged secret plan between the Egyptian Coptic church and a Lebanese merchant to train 1,300 Copts in Christian Phalangist military camps of Lebanon, Mayo claimed. It said former Lebanese President Charles Helou was trying to form a pan-Arab Chritisan organization to support the Christians in the Arab world as a counter to the Muslim Brotherhood, Heikal was among those arrested because he planned to publish a newspaper with the help of Pope Shenouda III. The Pope offered to donate $1.2 million to increase religious tension. Mayo said.

Pope Shenouda III was stripped by Sadat of state recognition as leader of the Coptic church during the crackdown. There are about six million Copts in Egypt, which has a 43 million population. Sadat's crackdown followed the riots between Christians and Muslims last June when 17 people were killed, according to government figures. Western diplomats say the actual figure was between 70 and 80.

A Soviet embassy spokesman said Monday that two of the diplomats left the country a long while ago and two of the journalists were expelled last October.

Chadian leader blames Libya

MOUNDOU, Charl, Sept. 14 (AP) -Libva has been attempting to destabilize southern Chad since the beginning of the month by encouraging a series of mutinies in army garrisons throughout the region, according to Vice President Abdul Kadar Катоцеце.

Col. Kamougue told the Associated Press here Sunday that he believed the mutinies among the enlisted men in Chad's National Army (FAT) in the towns of Moundou, Doba, Koumra and Sarh were planned in the capital N Diamena to furnish an excuse for Libyan troops to move into the south. "I'm tempted to say that the Libyans were looking for a chance to intervene in the south, the only part of the country that works," the 42-year-old southerner and former FAT commander said. "But it didn't work out because the conditions here weren't right."

Ali said in Peking earlier President Sadat will make an official visit to China shortly. Ali was speaking at a press conference on his return to Peking after a brief trip to the North Korean capital, Pyongyang. He said Sadat would visit China after he goes to Japan, and indicted that details of the trip were still to be worked out by Peking and Cairo. He gave no further details.

He said his talks with North Korean President Kim Il Sung had been "very cordial". Asked to comment on the recent crackdown and arrests in Egypt, he said "some opponents try to make use of the democracy in a very wrong way" and that the time had come "to implement the law".

Second blast victim dies in Israel

TEL AVIV, Sept. 14 (AP) -A second Italian tourist died from head wounds he received in r bomb blast in Jerusalem's old city Saturday, a hospital spokesman said

The Italian consulate identified the victim as Gallo Aldo, 55, from Turin. Another pilgrim from Turin was killed immediately Sunday in the grenade explosion and 23 other Italians were wounded. Thirteen others were still under hospital care Monday, three of them with serious injuries.

The tourists reportedly were returning to their hotel when the blast occurred at a souvenit shop.

The Israeli government has vowed to step up security for tourists, but tourism officials say they expect the attack to cause a drop on the number of tourists. No arrests have been reported. While most of the victims were Italians, several Palestinians were also wounded in the attack, police said. Two weeks ago, a German tourist was shot dead during an attack.

COLLUSION LEADS TO COLLISION

Collusion leads to collision. The winner in this case, will be as always has been, Israel. The losers, naturally will be the Arabs and the United States. In Israel's logic it takes three to fight a war so that two partners lose and the third triumphs.

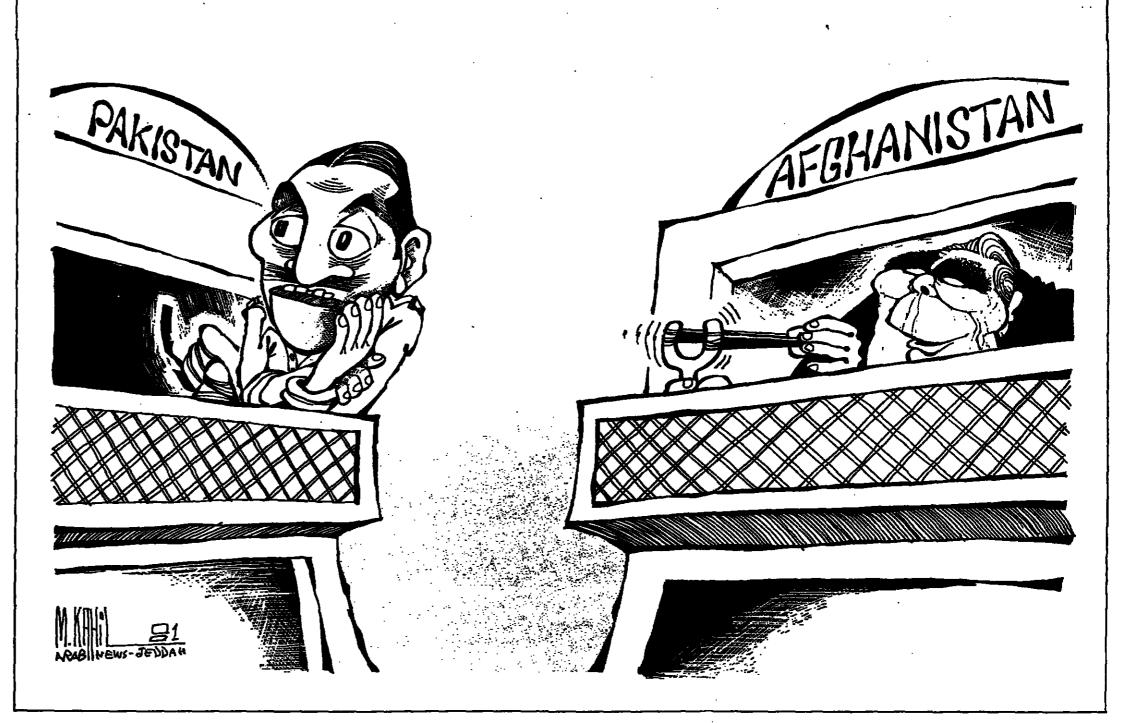

In the 1973 Arab oil embargo, Israel was the least affected - its supplies were secured by the United States. In the on Third World countries Most governments in the neantime the U.S. economy, together with the rest of the world's, suffered the logical jolts of the physical Arab oil action against the direct U.S. military support to Israel in the June 5 war. This seems to be an over-simplification of past Arab-U.S. relations. But today's evidence of Israel's strategic cooperation with the United States is an imminent replay of past events in the future. Also yesterday's warning by Saudi Arabia that the U.S. military cooperation with Israel bodes detriment to Washington's relations in the region is reminiscent of the oil embargo warning by late King Faisal six months before Israel launched its blitzkrieg on the Arabs in 1973.

We feel obliged to remind those interested in the Middle East that (U.S.-Israel) collusion never brings positive conclusions to the region. We feel obliged to remind those in Washington that history lessons of the recent past, as recent as eight years ago, have not been digested by the Capitol's students of politics.

Saudi Arabia has made a solemn statement that U.S. military assistance, which must be stopped, impedes the peace process between the Arabs and Israelis. In the Kingdom's view the strategic cooperation also makes Israel an American arsenal which destabilizes the region.

The appeal to the United States to take a reasonable and just stance in the Middle East reflects the aspirations of all nations longing for peace, and the aspirations of the exiled people from their homeland in Palestine.

S.E. Asia spending on tourism

By John Laird

BANGKOK -The developing countries of Southeast Asia already part of the world's fastest-growing holiday region - are planning to spend billions of dollars to attract more tourists.

Exotic cultures, lush tropical surroundings, fine beaches, nightlife and shopping opportunities continue to draw Europeans, Japanese, north Americans and Australians. Tourism officials say that new resorts and attractions being planned will add? opportunities for southeast Asian vacations for years to come. The optimism runs contrary to recent studies warning of adverse effects of tourism region see tourism development as economically bealth, creating new jobs and earning needed foreign exchange.

The five members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations - Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand - plus the colony of Hong Kong, earned $4.2 billion in tourism revenue last year, according to official figures, compared to $1.7 billion in 1975.

Singapore, which led the region with 2.5 million arrivals last year, plans to build 17 new hotels, adding 12,500 rooms to the island state by 1985. Hong Kong, vying with Singapore as a duty-free shoppers' paradise, had 2.3 million arrivals last year. Four hotels with 2,400 rooms have sprung up this year and another eight, with 3,000 rooms, should be completed by 1983.

Thailand welcomed 1.85 million visitors last year, and has its sights set on 3 million by 1986. It aims to transform the southern island province of Phaket with a number of beach resorts in the next 20 years. Thai officials hope to develop the northern

The Malaysian government has allocated $20 million for Langkawi and hopes to alter a $55 million in private investment for the area, which will have 1,095 hotel rooms.

The Philippines had 1 million tourists in 1980, and its current 1979-82 plan calls for spending $278.4 million for tourism. Officials say the figure will be revised, with a moratorium on hotel building in the capital of Manila.

A recent study by Denmark's Association for International Cooperation and Development has suggested that tourism can have adverse effects on Third World cultures. (AP)

Super-powers court Zia

The once isolated government of President Zia of Pakistan has never had a week like it. Senior delegations from both super-powers were almost bumping into each other as they arrived at Islamabad to meet Zia.

The first visitor was Moscow's Deputy Foreign Minister, Nikolai Firyubin, who ended three days of talks in Islamabad with little headway being made over Afghanistan. His visit had coincided with broadcasts from Radio Kabul saying that the Afghans were ready to hold bilateral, trilateral or multilateral talks' but added that 'no questions concern ng the existing regime in Afghanistan or other internal matters can be discussed."

Two senior U.S. diplomats arrived as Firyubin left Islamabad for talks with Mrs. Gandhi in New Delhi. The U.S. ambassador to thedu.n. Debate on the package is to begin next month in the House Foreign Affairs Committee in Washington and Pakistan is anxious to secure maximum support from Congress to overcome the Glen amendment barring U.S. aid to countries with nuclear arms programmes.

Apart from the $3.5 billion sid package Pafistan is also anxious to buy an estimated $750 million

Pakistan was told that the two squadrons of F-16s it wants would ot be available until the end of 1983. The Pakistanis ave protested and now it seems likely that in return for speeding up the deliveries of the fighters, the U.S. may well ssk for more concessions from the Pakistanis.

Others papers gave lead coverage to Syrian President Hafez Assad's message to King Khaled, which was delivered to the monarch by Abdul Halim Khaddam, Syrian deputy premier and foreign minister, during an audience Sunday.

Newspapers frontpaged the opening of the new premises for the Southern Region command in Khamis Mesheit by Minister of Defense and Aviation Prince Sultan Sunday. A meeting chaired by Interior Minister Prince Naif to discuss the pilgrimage security plan Sunday was prominently carried as a page one story in the newspapers which also mentioned the Kingdom's Ambassador in Beirut, Ali Shaer, as saying that Saudi Arabia has not refused, so far, to join the Arab deterrent forces with a symbolic force, adding that the matter depend on an Arab unanimous opinion. Meanwhile, Al Bilad reported in a front-page story, quoting the Egyptian television, that the Egyptian intelligence has unearthed a Soviet plot to topple the Sadat regime in the

In an editorial on the U.S.-Israel strategic alliance, Al Medina observed that it will have a direct effect on the Palestinian issue in view of the fact that there will be joint maneuvers, storage of arms and medical services in the Zionist entity. The paper described the alliance as an open revolution in the American policy toward the Middie East. Under the circumstances, the Arab world cannot establish cordial relations with Washington if the latter goes into a strategic alliance with enemy number one of the Arabs. This sudden shift in the American policy is sure to be met with an Arab reaction, which will depend on consultation among Arab leaders during their summit conference in November, and after collecting sufficient information on the "strategic alliance", the alliance, describing it as an extension to the conspiracy against the issue of Palestine and as a means to serve the expan-ionist ambitions of Israel. The paper held the view! at the alliance will meet the fate of Camp David if it is based on such serious designs. It urged the American officials to remember the fate of the Baghdad Pact and the Eisenhower Plan and said that the alliance would not only end like CENTO or the Eisenhower Plan but it will touch the very roots of the American interests.

On the other hand, Al Jazirah dwelt on the graduation of a fresh batch of 69 officers of the National Guard and said that the policy of the Kingdom's leadership is to build a strong nation capable enough of protecting the homeland and the Arab and Islamic nation from the aggressive designs of the enemies anywhere in the world. The paper added that the Kingdom has based its policies on the fundamentals of Islamic teachings which call for peace with others and not aggression on anyone. The enemies have long tried to weaken the Arab and Islamic nation, but the teachings of Islam have kindled the spirit of a holy war in the hearts of Arabs and Muslims for the restoration of their usurped rights by the use of force, if all peaceful methods fail, the paper said. It added that the third Islamic summit conference of Makkah and Taif has already awakened the conscience of Vuslims and Arabs who are determined to restore their usurped legitimate rights.

Okaz also concerned itself with the National Guard graduation ceremony, saying that Prince Abdullah's announcement regarding the opening of registration for university graduates to join the Guard as officers has been in tune with the process of all-out development which he is carrying out under the directives of King Khaled and Crown Prince Fahd. The paper added that

> On the other hand, Al Bilad discussed Saudi Arabia's material and moral support for Arab and Islamic countries, saying that the Kingdom has extended support in political, economic, information and military fields. In this context, the paper referred to Prince Sultan's statement in Khamis Mesheit, in which he declared that the Saudi Arabian armed forces are being built to serve the causes of the Arab and Islamic nation and to confront the challenges of the enemies of Arabism and Islam. Saudi Arabia has already crystallized the aspirations of the Arab and Islamic nation in the resolutions of the third Islamic summit, the paper added.

Troops halt mass jungle suicide

By Geoffrey Matthews

BOGOTA -A new Jonestown-style mass suicide by religious fanatics has been averted in South America. Dagoberto Mora, a 37-year-old Colombian, never knew the infamous Rev. Jim Jones but clearly developed a strong identification with him after the world was rocked by news of the mass suicide of the American's followers in the Guyanan jungle over two years ago. Like Jones, Mora did not get along with mains-tream Protestant groups (themselves a distinct minority in a strongly Catholic country like Colombia) and was expelled from one of them for rebellious behavior and from another for misappropriation of funds.

Like Jones, Mora last year proceeded to found his own religious sect in his home city of Ibague in central Colombia and to set himself up as a godlike figure to his followers, over whom he displayed mesmerizing power.

As with Jones in San Francisco, allegations were soon being made in Ibague that Mora was extorting money and property from his followers. who were said to live in terror of him. Mora did not have to look as far afield as Jones to find a suitable refuge from trouble and a chance to rule unchallenged.

More than 100 of his followers - mainly old people, mothers and children - agreed to travel north with him this year into the dense jungle of an isolated region bordering Venezuela.

There they lived a Spartan existence, subject to Mora's fierce discipline, with little food. Mora told them they were to pray and to prepare for a mass suicide on 20 October - the day on which, he predicted, the world would end.

Colombian authorities are convinced a second Jonestown would have occurred but for the intervention of one anxious man, whose wife and children were among Mora's followers.

With the help of Indian guides he penetrated the jungle and found the community last month. After fierce arguments with Mora, he was allowed to leave with his three youngest children and six children of other families. However, his wife and elder children chose to stay on.

On their return to civilization, the children's testimony alerted the authorities who recalled that similar warnings about the original Jonestown had been fatally ignored in Guyana and the United States.

Troops were sent in to arrest Mora and to rescue his followers, who were all found to be suffering from acute malnutrition.

Today the man they called Dios Mora is in a prison call in Ibague, awaiting trial on charges of kidnapping the many children he took the jungle.

He also faces charges of extortion.

Mora stands by his prediction that the world will end on 20 October with an outbreak of plagues and fires. Many his followers still believe him.

Parades thin, cheers fade, hostages resume their lives

WASHINGTON (WP) - The parades have thinned, the cheers have faded and the 52 Americans freed nearly nine months ago rom captivity in Iran are discovering what iltered states of "normality" they have come

Army Sgt. Ist Class Donald Hohman sufers from insomnia, has a fear of crowds and, he says, has been seeing a psychiatrist since he broke into tears at the Mardi Gras in New Orleans last winter.

One freed hostage came back into Amerian society after 444 days in prison with an irge to stock up on underwear and has equired far more dresser-drawer and closet pace than his wife had left free for him. Four of the hostages' marriages have nded in divorce and another three have indi-

The marriage of State Department comunications officer Charles A. Jones also is nding. His wife, Mattie, filed divorce papers une 24 in Detroit.

Psychiatric Care Required Two female dependents of hostages have tempted suicide. Two former hostages have equired "extensive nepropsychiatric care" ith lengthy periods in institutions, and more ian a dozen others are receiving some sychiatric care. Severe depression, freepating fear and an inability to concentrate e among the major complaints.

Malcolm K. Kalp, one of the first returning stages to reveal that he had been beaten iring his 444 days in Iranian captivity, still diers from "a constant ringing in my earand have difficulty sleeping at night."

Some Receive Threats Several former hostages have received reats, and in one case the children of a istage were sent home from school because threats against their lives. Some children of stages are receiving psychiatric treatment. Some are reluctant to let daddy out of their sight, for fear he might disappear again.

There are also half a dozen cases of ulcers, weight loss, high blood pressure, skin rashes, migraine hea daches intestinaland colon disturbances and a number of cases of T-M syndrome, a stress disorder caused by constant grinding of teeth and-or clenching of jaws. There are nightmares and flashbacks.

"The combined horror of the experience haunts me still," Army Warrant Officer Joseph M. Hall said. "I continue to have the feeling that imminent danger lurks nearby. I know how vulnerable I and my family are and I await the next tragedy."

Commission Studying Compensation Much of this litany from hostages and their families was gathered by a presidential commission studying the possibility of compensation for the captives. The adjustment difficulties are within the range predicted by hostage specialists, officials said, and there is no way to know whether at leas some of the mental, marital and other problems might have occurred without the hostage crisis. Most Cope With Problems

"Most do have some problems, but they're not insurmountable," said hostage wife Keough, president of the Family Liaison Action Group (FLAG) which represents the hostage families. "They're what you'd expect — simple life-adjustment problems. Most are coping. Sort of a normal muddling along."

Quite a few hostages came back to houses they had never lived in before, to newly independent wives, she said. Some wives had assumed the role of disciplinerian over the children and conflicts arose when the returned father wanted that job back.

One hostage family vignette is about going to the supermarket together. The returned hostage pushed the cart down the aisle. reached for the food items he remembered as part of their usual menu and was told there had been a change. In his absence, his wife and kids had switched to lighter foods, fewer pot roasts, stews and "manly dishes."
"Now we do it this way," has become a well-worn phrase in some of the families, according to one wife. Possessive relatives and friends are another part of post-captivity life for some.

the "touch-a-star" syndrome. "If you want an exciting dinner party, invite a hostage" the wife said. "The reaction is some bewilderment, like 'I was never that popular before,' and also a sense of obligation."

Some families reportedly have been the target of criticism from neighbors accusing them of trying to profit from the crisis, or being publicity hungry.

Some, such as Hohman and hostage wife Dorothea Morefield, feel lingering bitterness against the State Department for its handling of the crisis, particularly its treatment of the families and the hostages' homecoming.

"I never want to see some of the State Department people again," Morefield said.

"There's a bitterness there, and it'll take time to see whether it can be absorbed or what will happen." Some returned hostages are eager to talk about their ordeal, while others seek privacy.

Several are working on books.

Still In News They continue to pop up in the news. Recently the former captives drew unexpected cheers in the Journal of the American Dental Association, where air force dentists give a happy account of hostage dental hygiene. Though "foul-tasting Iranian toothpaste" made brushing an unpleasant chore, they found, the hostages brushed "from three to six times daily." The mothers of some hostages, have suffered failing health since the captives were released. Some relatives speculate that it is partly, as one put it, the presence of "a tremendous void where there had been a sense of mission" when they were busy writing notes, keeping scrapbooks, keeping the home

"I think each family makes its own adjustments," said the wife whose husband shocked her with his greatly expanded need for drawer space. She quickly learned to under-stand it, she said. "We worked out a new division drawer space with no difficulty."

The presidential commission, formed by President Carter and continued by President Reagan, is expected to announce its recommendations on the government's obligations to these and any future hostage groups, with a view toward some kind of comprehensive

Pineapple diet fad is dangerous, doctors, nutritionists alarmed

SAN FRANCISCO, (G) — At parties attended by the affluent in America these days it is not uncommon to see a portly guest ignoring the buffet, but hackling lumps off the centerpiece pineapple instead. The nation's fatties, torn pitifully between advertising for both slimming courses and "gourmet" or "junk" foods, have swallowed an extraordinary new diet in which the piece de resistance is the pineapple. This has caused the price of the fruit to rise sharply, bringing joy nutritionists. They say the diet is not only dangerous: It could even be fatal.

The pineapple is part of a regimen which insists on an exclusive intake of fruit for the first ten days. It is outlined in a book called The Beverly Hills Diet, now entering its ninth week at the top of the New York Times Nonfiction Best-Seller List.

Featuring a pineapple on the cover, the hardback has sold a million at $11.50 a copy. It is making a millionaire out of its appropriately skinny author, Judy Mazel, thus lending

She lives in Beverley Hills, where "your socially elite, your movers and shakers," as she calls them, suffer horribly from tuxurious food. Those she has cured, she claims, include Liza Minelli, Engelbert Humperdinck, and Marie Osmond. Her thesis is that by combining certain foods one can "burn up" fat instead of storing it the body, and that fresh pineapple, particularly, has this property. That, say the doctors, is quite simply non-

Nutritionists all over the country have said that although the diet will cause weight loss, it lacks essential minerals, vitamins and other nutrients.

Dr. Mark Şaginor, assitant clinical professor of medicine at the University of California, in Los Angeles, says: "This is the most dangerous diet I have ever come across. If you did a lot of strenous exercise on it, you could kill yourself."

Nobody has been reported to have actually died from the diet, but Dr. Saginor cities a case of friend who lost 17 lbs in three weeks on the diet, and then went skiing. He developed an irregular heart rhythm and had to be flown home for emergency introvenous injections.

Other medical critics have listed possible side effects such as diarrhoea, gout, kidney stones, coronaries and strokes, Dr. Art Uleme, a medical consultant in Los Ageles, and a gynaecologist, said the diet could be particularly harmful to pregnant women. He described it as "deceitful, deficient, and dangerous," because of its "wild claims" and erroneous medicine. Miss Mazel does insert a warning in the book about the need for medical supervision, but this is so routine, even for well known brand medicines, that critics believe many people may ignore it.

She at first conceded "some over simplifications" but dismissed the medical criticism. She now declines to answer, saying: "My goal is to make the world slim, not to fight with doctors. I'm just doing my thing and putting a smile on peoples faces."

U.S. jets last year intercepted 174 Soviet military aircraft and the rate of intercept is slight higher. Intercept is a mid-air razing that reminds an inquiring nation its flights are getting too close, and risking an incident.

In two years, no incidents have occurred. The North American Aerospace Defense Command says there is no evidence that Soviet military aircraft have overflown the United States.

The 1972 agreement, designed to prevent ship and air collisions, contained a promise by each side to remain to avoid the risk of collision on the seas and in international air space. A risk remains, that reconnaissance will touch off a shooting.

After two setbacks

Jailed IRA guerrilla joins hunger strike

BELFAST, Sept. 14 (AP) — Convicted rish Republican Army guerrilla Gerard Hodgins refused breakfast in his cell in Northern Ireland's Maze Prison Monday to oin a hunger strike by six other jailed nationalists, the Northern Ireland Office reported.

Hodgins, 21, is the 22nd nationalist to refuse food since the hunger strike was annehed March 11 in a bid to force the British government to treat jailed guerrillas as intual prisoners of war. He is also the roungest man to join the fast on which 10 nunger strikers have starved themselves to leath. The British refuse to make any concessions to the prisoners while the fast continues.

The almost exclusively Roman Catholic IRA's "Provisional" wing and its splinter groups are fighting to push the British out of Northern Ireland. They seek to reunite the Protestant-dominated province with the overwhelmingly Catholic Irish Republic.

Hodgins, from the flashpoint Turf Lord district of Catholic west Belfast, was jailed for 14 years in November, 1977, for possessing a semi-automatic revolver. Hodgins shared a cell for a time two years ago with Bobby Sands, the IRA leader who launched the hunger strike. Sands died May 5 on his 66th day without food, the first of the hunger strikers to die.

Hodgins was the first convicted guerrilla to join the hunger strike since it suffered two big setbacks last week when the families of two hunger strikers authorized medical attention for them and the splinter Irish National Liberation Army said its men in the Maze will scale down their participation in the death

Altogether, four families have intervened to take their men off the fast since July. A fifth abandoned the strike in May because of a perforated stomach ulcer that doctors warned would be fatal unless treated.

Hodgins' action is part of an IRA effort to step up the number of hunger strikers to eight at a time when the strike appeared to be on the wane. Another IRA man in the Maze was expected to join the hunger strike next Monday. The longest surviving hunger striker at present is INLA guerrilla Liam McLosky, who was on his 43rd day without food Monday. His condition was reported "stable."

All efforts to end the hunger strike, which has given the IRA's "Provisional" wing a major political and propaganda boost, have so far failed amid an upsurge of violence. At least 56 persons have been killed in Northern Ireland since the fast began. A report on conditions in the prison prepared by the International Red Cross will be presented to the government later this week.

The Northern Ireland Office (NIO) does not expect any important criticism of the prison regime and is likely to make the report public. A three-man Red Cross inspection team spent five days visiting Northern Ireland's four main prisons, including the Maze near Belfast, in July. They spoke to hunger strikers, prison staff, governors and the NIO.

Meanwhile, security officials said Sunday they had defused 10 homemade mortar bombs that had been preset and aimed at a police station in Bessbrook.

Ignorant about NATO

MADRID, Sept. 14 (R) — Nearly half the people in Spain do not know that NATO is a Western military alliance and only 29 percent of those who do know believe that Spain should join, according to an opinion poll published Monday. The poll was published in the economic weekly Nuevo Lunes (New Monday) as the Spanish Parliament prepares to debate government plans to apply for membership of NATO, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

It said 47 percent of the people polled did not know what NATO was. Of the 53 percent who knew, 29 percent were in favor of Spanish membership and 49 percent were against it.

Poll shows U.K. favors SDP alliance

LONDON, Sept. 14 (AP) — Britain's newest political party, the Social Democrats, must form an alliance with the middle-road Liberels to stand a chance of winning the country's next general election, The Times newspaper reported Monday.

Without each other, both the SDP and Liberals would come in behind the two leading parties, the ruling Conservatives and Labor, the paper added. Other trends outlined in a new Gallup Poll conducted for The times showed that the Conservative Party of Prime Minister Margaret Thacher is continuing to lose ground across the country and that both major parties are losing trade union support to the SDP.

The poll showed that a Liberal-SDP alliance would win 41 percent of the national vote in a general election — the same figure given in another Gallup poll for The Daily Telegraph last month and indicating support for a merger is being maintained. Labor would get 31 percent of the vote and the Conservatives 25 percent, The Times said.

But if no SDP- Liberal alliance was formed, the poll showed. Labor would win the election wiht 39 percent of the votes, followed by the Conservatives with 30 percent, Social Democrats with 16 and Liberals slipping from the third to the fourth most supported party with 13 percent.

An alliance between the Liberals and the SDP would prove popular in an election among all sectors of the population except the working class who would vote Labor and in the north of England and Scotland where Labor would win again, the poll showed.

It said that at present, the SDP's weakest point is women voters and voters over the age of 65. But it is proving very popular with mentrade union members, house-owners and voters between the ages of 25 and 34.

The SDP last week gained its 16th defecting lawmaker in the House of Commons. Fifteen Laborites disillusioned with the growing ultra-leftist trend of their party, and one Conservative, have so far joined the party since it was formed in March.

Phillips denies report about marital problems

LONDON, Sept. 14 (AP) — Capt. Mark Phillips. husband of Britain's Princess Anne, has denied an Australian newspaper report that his marriage to Queen Elizabeth It's daughter is on the rocks.

The 32-year-old former cavalry officer snapped at reporters Sunday night when asked if the report in the Sydney Sunday Telegraph was unfounded: "Yes. You should know better than to even ask me." Buckingham Palace officials declined comment on the report. A spokesman noted: "We really have nothing to say about rumors like this."

Phillips' father, food magnate Peter Phillips, dismissed the Australian report as "malicious and hurtful speculation." The Sydney newspaper said the queen was upset by rumors that her daughter's four-year-old marriage was in trouble, particularly by reports of a "close relationship" with a "television personality."

"television personality."

The paper did not identify the woman.
But British TV star Angela Rippon, who became a popular figure as the British Broadcasting Corporation's first female newscaster, was quoted by the San daily in London as denying it was her. Both the Sydney paper and the San are owned by Australian press baron Rupert Mundoch.

Ms. Rippon. 36, is writing a book about horses with Phillips an has played several times at Gatcombe Park, the Phillips' home in Gloucestershire southwest of London.

The San quoted Ms. Rippon who is married to businessman Christopher Dare, as saying: "The marriage of Princess Anne and Capt. Phillips is one which does not show even the slightest sign of a hairline crack, let alone breaking up." She denied having "a close relationship" with the handsome captain, "Only a good working relationship."

She added: "It's difficult to make a denial when no specific allegations being made, instead. I'm being made the subject of innuendo."

Over shoddy toys

Ecuador coalition may fall

OUTTO, Sept. 14 (AFP) — Ecuador Monday faces the most serious government crisis since democracy was restored two years ago — all on account of a consignment of shoddy Christmas toys.

Monday's vote of confidence in the Chamber of Representatives could bring down Prime Minister Carlos Feraud-Blum and his center-left coalition cabinet, also under attack for the economy and two incidents involving left-wing guerrillas.

Now the opposition and even some of the ruling majority groups have vehemently criticized the government for "administrative irregularities" involving the purchase of $400,000 worth of toys last Christmas. The toys, bought as presents for the children of the nation's policemen, turned out to be sadly substandard, and the disgruntled fathers raised a furor of protest.

In his defense, Feraud-Blum, who is also minister of the interior, admitted before the chamber last week that the toy fiasco was the result of "administrative mistakes." His coalition, comprising the Concentration of Popular Forces (CFP) Party, Popular Democracy-Christian Democratic Union, and independents, managed to field a 35-seat majority at a recent vote to appoint a new speaker to the chamber.

That majority could well come apart at Monday's vote of confidence. For though none of the parties has yet taken an official stance in the matter, some of their representatives have already indicated in press interviews that it will be difficult to hold the majority together — despite the impressively candid way in which the prime minister has mandled his defense.

Ferand-Blum's government, which has been in power since April 1979, has recently been under fire over two incidents involving left-wing guerrillas. One concerned the occupation of the Ecuadoran Embassy in Havana, the other the forcible repatriation of a group of Colombian M-19 rebels who crossed into Ecuador last month.

Leftists routed, Salvador claims

BERLIN, El Salvador, Sept. 14 (AP) — Government troops said Sunday they had completed successfully a five-day sweepagainst leftists operating in and around this small southeastern city.

About 5(0) soldiers, including commandes from the U.S.-trained "Atlacatf" assualt brigade, began fighting Tuesday with them in Usulutan province. No official reports on the end of the operation were available, But soldiers stationed around Berlin told reporters at least 50 leftists died in the fighting.

The soldiers, none of whom was willing to be identified, said rebel forces apparently withdrew from the region late Sunday. The troops claimed to have destroyed several rebel camps. Earlier Sunday, an army spokesman said the operation had "yielded favorable results."

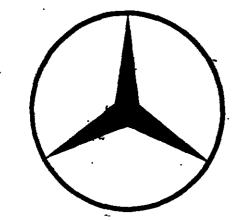

The spokesman, who also declined to be identified, said security forces in and around the city of Berlin, 94 kms southeast of San Salvador, had "dismantled several guerrilia camps" and taken "important prisoners." He refused to name the prisoners and gave no casualty figures for the five-day operation.

Army officials have denied claims, broadcast by a clandestine radio station, that the rebels had gained the upper hand in the fighting around Berlin. By mofficial count, political violence claimed at least 70 lives last week, including 40 selatives of National Guard troopers in Usuhtan reportedly shot or hacked to death by guernilas Wednesday.

The Salvadoran Human Rights Commission released figures last week estimating more than 32,000 persons have been killed in the violence since Oct. 15, 1979, when the U.S.-backed civilian-military junta took power in coup against the conservative government of President Carlos Humberto

Tass hailed the wall as a "defensive shield" which had "cut the ground from under the feet of the warmongers." A parade of armed militia and units of the East German National People's Army on East Berlin's Karl Marx Avenue Thursday drew an official protest to Moscow from the three Western allies, Britain, France and the United States, which officially govern West Berlin.

It said the parade violated the "demilitarized status of Berlin' and was all the more deplorable because it was intended to commemorate "the illegal" and inhuman construc-tion of the Berlin Wall in defiance of fundamental human rights." The Western allies regard East Berlin as the Soviet sector of the occupied city and direct all protests to the

The city itself seemed strangely quiet early Friday after the past few days of mounting protest and anger in the West and Thursday's military show and proud speeches in the East. In East Berlin, the red banners and hoardings praising the "anti-fascist protection wall" will remain for a few days.

The crosses of remembrance to those killed attempting to flee to the West are permanent fixtures in West Belin, but West Berliners rarely pass by the bleak areas that once were central Berlin.

Soviets moot arms ban in outer space

UNITED NATIONS, Aug. 14 (AFP) -The Soviet Union has proposed banning all sorts of weapons in outer space and attacking space vehicles of other countries.

A letter from Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko to United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim Thursday pointed out that a 1967 treaty already banned weapons of mass destruction. But there was a growing danger that other kinds of arms might be carried in space shuttle vehicles, he Gromyko sent the draft of a nine-point treaty to be submitted to the United Nations Assembly that will convene next Sept. 15.

The draft warned that "inhebited rev spacecraft of the present type" (apparently meaning the U.S. space shuttle vehicles) might be used to stock weapons. The treaty would ban weapons of any type in space, or on celestial bodies including the moon.

Article 3 of the pact would ban attacks on spacecraft of other countries, hindering their functions or changing their trajectory if they were not violating the treaty. (There has been speculation that the American space shuttle would be useful for destroying spy satellites.)

Countries signing the treaty would use their own technical means to verify that other countries were not violating the agreement. The signers would also promise not to interfere with the verification means of other countries.

Mitterrand sees Reagan in October

SANTA BARBARA, California, Aug. 14 (AFP) — French President Francois Mitterrand will have private talks with President Ronald Reagan in October when he goes to the 200th anniversary celebrations of the Battle of Yorktown which ended the American Independence War, official sources said here Friday.

The meeting will be the second toplevel contact between the two presidents. They had a private meeting at the Ottawa economic summit of Western industrial nations in July.

After visiting Yorktown, on the Virginia coast, on Oct. 17 and 18, Mitterrand is expected to go to Washington and then New York, before traveling to Mexico for the North-South summit at Cancun. The presence of the French President at Yorktown and at a special dinner being hosted by Reagan at Williamsburg recalls the role played by the French in the Independence War against the British.

French troops led by Lafayette and Rochambeau fought alongside George Washington's forces and played a vital role in forcing the surrender of the British troops under Cornwallis to end the war.

13 die in U.K. 'copter fall

LONDON, Aug. 14 (R) — All 1.3 men aboard a twin-engine helicopter bringing workers ashore from gas rigs off eastern Eng-land were believed to have died when it plunged into the sea. The crash Thursday was the worst involving a British helicopter and an oil company official said it seemed to have been caused by "something catastrophic."

It was the second helicopter crash in the North Sea oil and gas fields in two days. (On . Wednesday one oil rig worker was killed and 13 men were plucked from the sea off Scotland when a machine crashed.) Eight bodies were winched from the sea Thursday night and a Royal Air Force spokesman said a ninth sank.

Chances of finding any survivors are now nil," he said. The coastguard, however, held out a glimmer of hope. "The only chance now is that the cabin did not break up and there's one or two of them trapped in an air lock," a coastguard official said. The Wessex helicopter, with its two-man crew, was bringing 11 Amoco Oil Company maintenance workers

The cause of the crash was a mystery. It occurred in calm weather and the sea was flat. The helicopter appeared to have hit the water with some force, rescuers said. "It looked a pretty disastrous crash," said Royal Air-Force rescue pilot flight Lt. Stuart Mould, The only thing I can assume is that it must have been something catastrophic which caused this accident," said Brendan McKedwn, Amoco : exploration's divisional man-

"If one of the engines failed, the second engine could fly the craft perfectly safely," he said. If both engines failed, the Wessex would be able to make a controlled descent and would be supported by its own automatically inflating dinghy. Investigations were launched by the British Trade Department and Bristow Helicopters, which owned and operated the aircraft. The North Sea's worst helicopter crash was in 1978 when 18 persons died in a Norwegian craft.

Voyager set to measure Saturn rings

WASHINGTON, Ang. 14 (R) — The Verager 2 spacecraft will try to measure the number and width of Saturn's rings when it flies past on Ang. 25, scientists have said. Swooping toward the sunlit side of the planet, Verager 2 is expected to get far more spectacular pictures than Verager 1, which arrived on the dark side of the planet last November.

the planet last November. Andrew Stofan, a senior official of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), told reporters Thursday: "The Voyage 2 spacecraft is totally healthy. It is starting to send back actures of the planet already."

Voyages 2 will try to fill in the gaps left by Veyeger 1, NASA scientists said. These include getting high-resolution pictures of Saturn's moons, which did not photograph well last year, and taking a closer look at mysterious spokes and twines in Saturn's vast ring system.

But a top priority for Voyager 2 will be measuring the hundreds of concentric rings which stretch over 40,000 miles above the cloud surface of the gaseous planet. As Veyager 2 flies over the rings, an instrument called a photopolarimeter will be trained on the distant star Delta Scorpii, timing each apparent blink as the star disappears behind a ring and then cappears on the other side.

Voyager 2 will fly 14,300 miles closer to Saturn than Veyager 1 and is expected to get more detailed pictures of the spokelike lines across the rings and of intertwining rings seen in the earlier mission. Veyager 1 is now flying outward toward inters space, the scientists said.

Sweden unveils plan said slashing to bolster economy

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 14 (AFP) - The government Monday devalued the Swedish crown by 10 percent in presenting a new economic recovery program for Sweden.

Trying to stimulate the export, reduce the import and combat inflation, the government also proposed to lower the record-high value added tax (VAT) from 23.46 percent to 20.0 percent and to ban all prices increases to the end of the year.

The economic package also included other saving measures to go into effect at a later date. The lowering of the VAT, requires approval by parliament. The government did not propose to adjust the 12.0 percent dis-collective.

PEKING, Sept. 14 (AFP) - A move which began timidly last year to turn certain sectors of the Chinese economy over to private individuals and concerns is now going fullsteam ahead.

The most startling example of what this means for agriculture comes from the southwestern province of Sichuan, where authorities have decided to temporarily decollectivize some areas of land to boost production in areas badly stricken by the catasthropic flooding of the last two months.

This measure, unprecendented since land collectivization in the 1950s, has also been justified on the grounds that it will help the peasants of China's most heavily populated province of 100 million "overcome their difficulties".

A drive for reafforestation in Sichuan has also led to more private ownership. The English language China Daily recently reported that peasants could now apply for certificates guaranteeing their ownership of mountainous or wooded areas that they hadreplanted with trees.

Authorities have blamed excessive, uncontrollable deforestation for the seriousness of floods which left nearly 1,000 dead and 1.5 million people homeless in the province. The moves toward private control of land. officially presented as temporary measures, have been in the offing for the last two years although heretical according to Maoist dogma.

The devaluation was designed to help exporters, whose sales have been sluggish this year so far. The trade balance remains in surplus at $ 180 million due to reduced imports. The dollar's rise has produced a jump of 15 to 25 percent in the Swedish crown vis-a-vis the currencies of this country's main customers. Devaluation will make imported goods less competitive, helping the "buy Swedish" movement and creating jobs. The unemployment rate 2.2 percent with 116,000 people registered out of work, the highest rate since October 1972. Devaluing the currency by 10 percent, as urged by some business interests, will also raise the oil bill and increase the external debt, which is already around $ 9 billion. The Swedish government also announced that the value added tax (VAT) would be cut from 23.46 percent to 20 percent beginning in November in a move to boost home demand and jobs. Further moves announced were a price freeze until the end of the year and 600 million crowns ($ 120 million) to

Oil companies winter stocks

LONDON, Sept. 14 (AFP) - Major energy companies have begun deliberately reducing their winter stocks of oil because of high storage costs, the Financial Times reported Monday.

"Normally during the July-September period oil companies build up stocks at a worldwide rate of some two million barrels a added that latest industry estimates suggest that the companies may be reducing stocks by one million to one and one-half million barrels per day.

The new policy "will leave the industry with a substantially smaller safety margin against a supply crisis or abnormal seasonal demand and could renew pressure on crude oil prices," according to the publication.

"Senior officials of the International Energy Agency (IEA) are concerned that if the trend continues, Saudi Arabia will find it more difficult to gain agreement within the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries for a unified pricing system based on a moderate level of$32 to $34 a barrel," the Financial Times said.

Subroto said the government's decision to lower some oil prices was prompted by the current world market glut, a surfeit that has reached more than a million barrels daily.

2-tier system mooted

EEC seeks ways to curb interest rate spiral struggling to emerge from recession, finds the BRUSSELS, Sept. 14 (R) — After being rebuffed by President Ronald Reagan in Ottawa, European Common Market govermnents are anxiously searching for new ways to bring down interest rates on their side of the Atlantic.

There are no signs that the 10 will come up with any easy formula to insulate themselves from the 20-percent level of U.S. rates and the strong dollar, which have pushed up the borrowing costs in West Europe, delayed recovery from recession and contributed to the worst unemployment of the postwar

At any rate the search so far has been fruitless, and economists say that most governments may have to make further cuts in public spending while rigorously fighting inflation to prevent European currencies depreciating against the dollar. Most have lost 20 percent of their dollar value this year.

French Finance Minister Jacques Delors' plan for a two-tier interest rate system has been the only concrete suggestion to emerge since Washington told European leaders at the July Ottawa summit they could not expect a change in U.S. monetary policies.

The plan has received a skeptical though polite response in almost every West European capital, diplomatic sources said. Delors' idea, born out of the Socialist government's determination to resist spending cuts, is to create a dual system of interest rates.

Borrowers at home would have access to relatively cheap finance while interest rates on EEC currencies held outside the community would be in line with U.S. levels.

But such a strategy would involve a complex system of exchange controls to insulate the community's financial markets. West Germany, disenchanted with its own experiment with exchange controls in the early 1970s, would reject any such artificial barriers, the sources said.

Chancellor Helmut Schmidt has been careful not to reject the French idea too brusquely, but Central Bank President Karl Otto Poehl has been less inclined to mask his opposition. Delors will be in Brussels this week for a meeting of EEC finance ministers, but it is not clear whether he will push for further study of the two-tier system.

European leaders have been heartened by President Reagan's latest round of spending cuts, but there are lingering doubts that they will be enough to ease the pressure on interest rates.

They believe the cost of credit in the U.S. is likely to stay high, the sources said, though President Reagan is optimistic that rates will fall in the not too distant future when the financial community sees his economic plan is

10 nations debate role of banks in aiding farmers

KARACHI, Sept. 14 (R) - A 10-nation seminar began Monday on the role of central banks in strengthening credits to small farmers in the near east and north Africa.

Delegates from Cyprus, Jordan, Libya, Sudan, Syria, Som North Yemen and South Yemen are attending the two-week seminar. The seminar is organized by the Near East and North African region Agricultural Accociation with support of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization. Pakistani State (central) Bank Governor A.G.N. Kazi, opening the seminar, said there was a need for an effective institutional credit structure in developing countries for financing agriculture. Agricultural growth in the developing countries had not kept pace with population growth, giving rise to food shortages and increasing reliance on grain imports, he said.

BRIEFS

NEW DELHI, (AFP) - Indian-Soviet trade totaled some $6.3 billion in the period 1976-80 against $1.4 billion in 1961-65, United News of India (UNI) said here Monday. Last year's trade was about $1.9 billion. Main Indian imports are currently crude oil, fertilizer, nonferrous metals, asbestos and newsprint. The USSR takes mostly consumer goods, and is India's top buyer accounting for 15 percent of its exports.

WASHINGTON, (AFP) - Several countries receiving food aid from the United States become valuable customers for U.S. farm produce, the department of agriculture reported here. Its economists found that in the year to Sept. 30, 1980, South Korea was the most striking example. Its purchases in this category from the U.S. came to $1.6 billion, and it rated seventh among countries buying Ameri-

cost of new financing prohibitive. Among the community's financial experts there is a growing feeling that "we will just have to sit tight and hope U.S. rates come down sooner rather than later", One diplomat said. But govern-ments are also aware that the answer to high interest rates does not simply lie across the Atlantic, the sources said. The West Germans have announced steep cuts in state spending and coupled with an improved trade performance this has fueled hopes that record Frankfurt money-market rates will soon fall. Britain's Conservative government is refusing to budge from its monetarist line in the face of heavy pressure to reflate the depressed economy, but is worried that it may have to raise interest rates to stop sterling's slide against the dollar.

The French Socialist government, risking pressure on the franc, has forced down bank interest rates to 14.5 percent to help its refla-tion program aimed at reducing unemploy-

The Swiss, on the other hand, have tightened the interest rate screw still further because of fears that a 7.4 percent annual inflation rate was getting out of hand. The result has been a strong boost for the Swiss franc on exchange markets. The EEC monetary committe which groups treasury and central bank officials from the 10 nations, spelled out Europe's own contribution to the high cost of borrowing in a confidential report just ahead of the Ottawa summit.

"In general the level of interest rates can be reduced...by substantially reducing the goverament deficit," the report said in an obvious reference to the high budget deficits run by many member states. Curbing these shortfalls, particularly countries like Italy and Belgium, could be a substantial help to the downward movement of interest rates, the sources said

Britain's chancellor of the exchequer, Sir Geoffrey Howe, who is in the chair at finance councils during the British presidency of the community, is likely to give strong emphasis to this side of community policy, they said. EEC finance ministers are also expected to give more attention to the inflationary impact of the wage indexation systems which operate in some member states, linking wages to the rate of inflation. The EEC executive has already suggested compulsory curbs on such systems which will be examined by the finance ministers this week. "The only way to insulate ourselves from high U.S. interest rates is to bring down inflation faster in Europe than it comes down in the U.S.," one expert said.

and cannot provide the basic amenities to their swelling numbers. Other LDCs refused any immediate comment on the compromise. worked out after days of intensive private negotiations.

The Group of 77 had been Jemanding that LDC aid be increased from some $6 billion last year to $24 billion by 1990. The group had sought that aid-giving countries allocate 0.15 percent of their gross national product by the mid-decade and 0.20 percent by 1990 in order to meet that goal.

The compromise proposal calls for donor countries to reaffirm their commitment to the U.N.'s 0.70 percent target for aid to all countries by 1990, saying that within this framework most aid-giving nations "will devote in the coming years 0.15 percent of their GNP to the least developed countries."

Other Jonors will double their assistance during the same period and "taken together these efforts are likely to achieve by 1985 a doubling of ODA (official development assistance) to the LDCs compared to the transfers to them during the last five years." the compromise said.

"In order to achieve this result, all donors have agreed to make a special effort to increase their contributions." The compromise, based in part on a Canadian proposal.

The entire aid package, including the money matter, over-all development programs, and a system to follow-up and supervize the programs, is to be submitted to a consensus conference vote later vionday.

One conference economist described the program as aimed at helping the LDCs ranging from Afghanistan to Upper Volta to "pull themselves up by their boot straps." The money demanded was less than what industrialized countries spend on dog and cat food, he said.

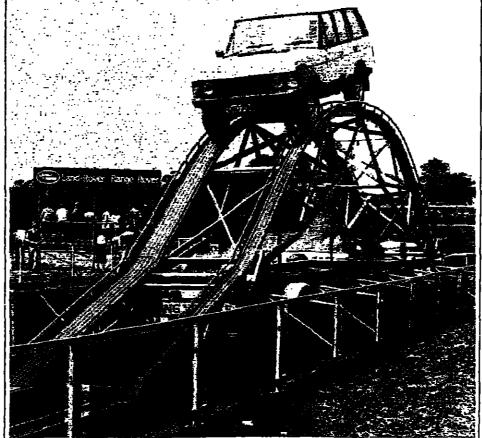

Among the few to comment on the compromise was l'anzania, an LDC, which said that the compromise was "basically satisfactory", but expressed disappointment that such matters as the volume of aid and the time frame for assistance were not agreed upon. However, "we consider that the political and overall pledge was a success," the head of the Tanzanian delegation said.

He also called a success the recognition given that something had to be done to help the LDCs with their plight. Meanwhile, Jan Pronk of the Netherlands and assistant secretary-general of the U.N. U.S. slams door on free trade

NEW YORK, Sept. 14 (ONS) - The United States plans a big effort later this month to protect its domestic textile industry from cheap Third World imports.

The move, at talks in Geneva on a new international Multi-Fiber Arrangement, will be presented as an exception to an overall U.S. policy of encouraging free trade.

In fact, the protectionist movement has been gathering strength in Washington for three years, urged on lately by fears that revival of the dollar will suck in even more cutprice imports.

Under the present Multi-Fiber Arrangement, Third World sales have been allowed to increase by 6 percent a year. Washington's aim at Geneva will be to press for a percentage that corresponds to growth in the U.S. domestic textile market - and that growth averages? percent a vear or less.

This is not the only example of action that fails to square with the Reagan administration's proclaimed commitment to the growth of international commerce. Murray Wei-lenbaum, chairman of the president's council of economic advisers, said recently: "We unabashedly believe in competition and market forces.' Two weeks later the White House made its most dramatic protectionist move vet by extracting a ple ige from Japan to cut shipments of cars to America.

Un-ler the agreement, Tokyo is tri n ning vehicle exports by 149,000 this year, and will limit them in 198? and 1983 in accordance with the growth, if any, of the U.S. home market. Nor is Reagan racing to remove the main protectionist barrier erected by his predecessor, Jimmy Carter, the steel triggerpricing system. Under this, a 'reasonable cost, for foreign steel is estimated every three mouths by the department of commerce on the basis of figures supplied by Japan.

Any shipments below that price are likely to be looked on as dumping and to trigger an investigation in Washington Despite Washington's action on steel, cars and textiles - not to mention a number of 'or-lerly marketing agreements' to limit imports of such products as TV sets — most Americans believe the U.S. market is still too open.

The celebrate i Harvar I economist, Joseph Schumpeter, used to talk of the 'consistent support given by the American people to protectionist policy, whenever they had the opportunity to speak their minds. A poll taken not long ago by the Roper organization showed that six out of 10 Americans thought the government should place restrictions on goods price I lower than comparable American products.

This sort of thinking gains strength, of course, in periods of economic adversity, and the sentiment is not lost on politicians or

Eurodollar rates lose ground

By J.H. Hammond

فيكذامن المعمل

JEDDAH, Sept. 14 - Eurodollar deposit rates fell back sharply on the Monday European markets, justifying in hind sight, the action taken by some Bahraini-based OBU's on Sunday when they cut back on Eurodollar rates. It was not only on the noney markets that the dollar fell -- the exchange markets also saw the Jollar fall against most currencies with the exception of the British pound and yen. The rival narkets reacted to the dollar's fall by seeing riyal deposit rates ease further from opening rates.

The European money markets were in a jittery mood vlonday with most participants not having a true feel for how dollar interest rates were moving. Some were predicting a further cut in U.S. prime interest rates, even by another full one percent. while others were saying the reduction in rates will come about from the Federal Reserve Board itself since it has come under renewed criticism from President Reagan about high Jollar interest rates issues.

With the markets in such a mood, the dollar very soon fell back sharply on the exchange narkets. The French franc recovered a lot of ground against the American currency, to be traded at 5.6900 and 5.6820 at one stage. This co npares favorably with 5.7280 levels Friday. As for the Ger nan nark, that currency for once had the pleasure of seeing the dollar under pressure with trading rates of 2.3710 being quoted. The nark Jollar exchange rate was 2,3940 Fri-Jay. The Swiss franc, already boosted by rises in Swiss interest rates, went up against the dollar from 2,0510 levels to 2,0230 levels Monday. The Swiss authorities are already reporting a capital inflow into Switzerland due to the actions of the Swiss Central Bank in raising the discount rate.

The currencies that remained weak against the dollar were the British pound and the Japanese yen. The pound was still reeling from last week's oil revenue probleins - an issue brought up by the statenents of Yamani is his interview on longterm oil pricing. The pound continued to fluctuate within a range of 1.7807 - 1.7900 with little signs of a Bank of England intervention. As for the Japanese ven, that currency remained stable at 231,20 levels.

The local rival markets saw rival dollar exchange rates fall sharply to 3,4180/90 from opening levels of 3.4190-00. Dealers reported some selling pressure develop on the Jollar after the European reactions filtered into the local narket. As for deposit rates, rival interest level fluctuated sharply in the short tenors, but once again re-nained firm in the longer periods. Week-fixed rates opened at $13\frac{r_2}{r_2} = 14$ percent, but fell to 1212 percent levels. One-month HBOR rates were quoted at 15 - 1512 percent by close of business after opening at 15 4 - 15 4 percent. One-year deposit rates closed a 16 * — 16 's percent, up fro n opening levels of 15 a - 16 a percent. LONDON, Sept. 14 (R) - Closing gold prices (in U.S. dollars per troy ounce): London

MOSCOW, Sept. 14 (AFP) - The cost of gasoline (petrol) will rise 82 percent under a new round of price increases that go into effect Tuesday informed sources said here

Usually, Soviet authorities comment that consumer price hikes are simply readjustments largely counter-balanced by increases in purchasing power.

London stock market

LONDON, Sept. 14 - Stock prices moved lower after news the Bank of Engalnd lent overnight funds to discount houses at 13-14 percent which was interpreted as a pointer to higher interest rates, dealers said. At 1500 hours, the forward trading index was down 1.4 at 552.0.

Government bonds fell by up to one point in longer maturities, while medium and short dates eased ¼ and ½ respectively, dealers added. Equities followed the trend in bonds with ICI closing 4p down at 274, having traded as high as 286p. Gold shares were higher with the bullion price, but some issues were below the day's highs while north American issues were inclined firmer.

GEC. Unilever and Glaxo fell between 10p and 12p, but oils closed firm, through below the day's highs. With Shell 8p higher at 374p.

The price of a liter of gasoline in the world's biggest oil producing country is going from 22 to 40 kopecks (28 to 51 U.S. cents). Tobacco will go up 29 percent, the sources

Some luxury goods, such as gold, silver, jewels and precious stones, carpets, and imported furniture, will go up 20 to 50 percent. But other products, including knitted ware for children, watches, and cameras, will come down.

Authorities said that the increases will not affect basic necessities, but only goods consideted "superfluous" or "luxurious," Inflation does not officially exist in the Soviet Union, and prices on some goods have not risen in 25 years. Soviet leaders frequently boast about price stability in their country. Rents in particular have remained stable, thanks to a 6,000 million-ruble ($7.7 billion) annual subsidy.

However, a guide to Soviet inflation rate can be guaged from price increases of produce from private farms. This sells for four or five times the price fixed in state stores, and inflation for these products run 10 to 15 percent a year.

As for industrial products. Soviet authorities said recently that the wholesale price of coal will rise 60 percent, fuel oil 51 percent, and natural gas 20 percent.

Falcons stage magnificent rally

NEW YORK, Sept. 14 (AP) — George Rogers, the No. 1 pick in this year's National Football League draft, lived up to his billing Sunday, running for 162 yards and one touchdown, leading the New Orleans Saints to a 23-17 upset over the Los Angeles Rams.

The victory, the saints first in two games under coach Burn Phillip, equaled New Orieans' entire total of 1980 when they had the NFL's worst record, 1-15.

Rogers, the Heisman Trophy winner from South Carolina, carried 29 times, scoring on a 5-yard run in the second quarter. He missed most of the second half with muscle cramps. Pat Haden passed 9 and 15 yards to Preston Dennard for LA's TDs. It was the second loss in two games for the perenially powerful

But the day belonged to Renner from the start of the final round. He went in front to stay as Valentine took a bogey on the first hole. Then he went 3-up with a birdie two holes later. After another birdie on the fifth green, he got down in par the rest of the wav. achieving the "great finish" he has hungered for since his only other PGA victory in 1979.

To claim Canada Cup Soviets avenge defeat

MONTREAL, Sept. 14 (AP) — Sergei Shepelev scored three goals and goaltender Vladi Lav Tretiak recorded 26 saves as the Soviet Union humiliated Canada 8-1 Sunday night to win the Canada Cup Ice Hockey:

Igor Larionov had two goals and Vladimir Krutov, Vladimir Golikov and Aleksandre Skvorstov one each for the Russians, who more than avenged a 7-3 defeated by the Canadian here last Wednesday night in the Teams' round-robin meeting in the six-country competition.

Clark Gillien from the National Hockey League's New York Islanders, scored the lone goal for Canada, which suffered its first defeat in 11 games, Canada had four exhibition victories, including a 3-2 decision over the Russians at Emonton on Aug. 29, four tournament victories and a tie against Czechoslovakia, and a 4-1 semifinal victory here Friday night over the United States.

The Russians were second behind Canada in the round-robin standings with a 3-1-1record and beat Czechoslovakia 4-1 last Friday in Ottawa in the other semifinal.

If anyone was to be capable of stopping Canada's vaunted firepower in the title game, it was Tretiak. He backstopped the Russians to a 3-1 lead after two periods and held the fort in the third as the comeback that a forum crowd of 17,033 wanted desperately failed to materialize.

Instead, the Russians added five goals. Shepelev's third a 1;39 gave him a total of six for the tournament as he beat Canadian netminder Mike Liut, who faced 26 shots, with a screened drive. Krutov's shorthanded goal came with Aleksei Kasatonov serving an interference

Swedish referee Dag Olsson. Sergei Kapustin fed Shepelev in the slot with a crisp pass from the left wing, and Shepelev, a 25-year-old member of Moscow Spartak in the First Division at home, beat Liut high to the glove side. After s scoreless first period, Larionov put the Russians ahead 1-0 at 4:56 of the second frame, taking a pass out from behind the net from Karutov and putting the puck home to Liut's right.

Gillies tied it at 8:02 as he took a pass from Mike Bossy beside the Russian goal, eluded falling defenceman Sergai Babino and fired a 15-footer past Tretiak. The goal emptied the Canadian bench of everyone except backup goalie Don Edwards, who joined in the celebration by clapping with his gloves.

Notts record 10-wkt. victory

LONDON, Sept. 14 (AP) - Nottingham-shire defeated Glamorgan by ten wickets at Trent Bridge Monday and won the English County Cricket Championship for the first time since 1929.

After leading by 120 runs on the first innings, Notts dismissed the Welsh side for 149 and needed only 30 runs to win. Richard Hadlee, New Zealander fast medium bowler, was again a match winner, as he has been in many games during the season. He followed up his four wickets for 18 in the first innings with four for 38 in the second.

Only Javed Miandad, Glamorgan's Pakistani star, held up Notts for long. He made 75, more than half his team's total, before being caught off Hadlee, . Only two other batsmen reached double figures.

When Notts last won the championship 52 years ago it was in the days of the fearsome fast bowling pair Harold Larwoo and Bill Voce. This time their attack has been spearheaded by two overseas bowlers, Hadiee and the team's South African captain Clive Eddie Hemmings, off-spinner who previously played for Warwickshire, did his share of work to capture the title. He took four Glamorgan wickets for 51.

 Bags U.S. Open for third year in a row

McEnroe confirms superiority over Borg

NEW YORK, Sept. 14 (AP) — John cEnroe, reasserting his dominance on his ome court, defeated Sweden's Bjorn Borg inday, capturing his third consecutive U.S. pen Tennis Championship 4-6, 6-2, 6-4, 3. It was his second straight victory over org in a premier tournament. McEnroe beat in the final at Wimbledon this summer. McEnroe became the first man to win both imbledon and the U.S. Open singles in the me year since Jimmy Connors in 1974. The is halted yet another attempt by Borg to in the U.S. Open. He has failed 10 straight

After splitting the first two sets, Borg took 3-2 advantage when he held off a double-sak point in the fourth game, then broke 1 left-hander in the fifth.

But McEnroe, ranked No. 1 in the world th Borg No. 2 lobbed to break the Swede d evened the set 4-4. Twice Borg came to ! net, and twice McEnroe's lobs fell inside ! baseline as Borg could only watch.

With the crowd of 20,000 coming alive, Enroe punctuated a love game with an . Then he broke Borg again to win the set, ping it with an explosive forehand volley. McEnroe also became the first man to win ee straight U.S. championships since Bill Tilden in 1925. "I'm honored to be out in the same breath as Bill Tilden," he said.

Borg left the stadium immediately after the final point. Later it was learned a man had telephoned a death threat to the National Tennis Center against the Swede, for the second day in a row.

Officials said Borg showered hurriedly, then was escorted by five plainclothes policemen down a back stairwell, past garbage to a waiting station wagon. His wife, Mariana, was not with him.

"He looked worried. We were walking along with him. He didn't say a word," said Rich Finn of the Association of Tennis Professionals.

"I would like to join in the commiseration for Bjorn,' McEnroe said in accepting his winner's check of more than $60,000. "I think he's going to win this damn championship some day, but hopefully not when I'm

Both served seven double-faults, but Borg's appeared to hurt him more. His double-fault in the eighth game of the fourth set gave McEnroe double-match point. But Borg saved the game, before he suffered his second straight loss in the finals here when McEnroe netted a volley and Borg followed with a service winner to knot the game at deuce. He finally won the game with an ace. Then it was McEnroe's turn to serve.

He started it with a double-fault. But it was the last point Borg would win in this year's tournament. McEnroe hit the baseline with a backhand. Then Borg's service return down the line was wide. A service winner put McEnroe up 40-15, just one point away from victory. He didn't let the chance get away.

When Borg's two-fisted backhand was long, McErnoe was champion again, and Borg had failed to win in his fourth trip to the final here.

McEnroe said he had formulated his game-plan after watching Borg beat Jimmy Connors in the semifinals. "He was hitting hard after playing Connors," McEnroe said. "I wasn't going to give him that pace. It's good for me to watch him play Connors: He (Connors) gets him in that groove."

Borg had started out as if this would be the year he would finally win the U.S. Open, a titled he has said is the one he really wants. He broke McEnroe at love in the seventh game, then held his next two serves to take the first set. "I think he let up and kind of got careless after the first set," McEnroe said later.

McEnroe jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the second set, breaking Borg in the second game with a sizzling forehand down the line off a second serve. He broke the Swede again in the sixth game as the New Yorker found every weapon in his arsenal working smoothly while Borg struggled.

In the third set, when McEroe missed a shot that would have broken Borg, the left-hander came alive. As his forehand volley sailed wide, he shouted, "oh, no." McEnroe's play and the tempo of the match quickened.

Anne Smith won two titles Sunday. Smith teamed with Kevin Curren of South Africa to capture the mixed doubles, 6-4, 7-6, over Joanne Russell and Steve Denton, Curren's pariner int he Men's doubles, and then joined Kathy Jordan as they defeated Rosie Casals and Wendy Turnbull of Australia 6-3, 6-3 in the finals of the women's doubles.

In another title match Sunday, Fred Stolle of Australia and Pancho Segura won the Pinch Invitational double, downing Owen Davidson of Australia and Ham Richardson 6-3, 3-6, 6-1.

6-3, 3-6, 6-1.

Sweden's Thomas Hoegstedt, who was seeded eight, captured the junior boys' singles crown by upsetting fifth-seeded Hans Schwaier of West Germany 7-5, 6-3.

STRETCHES: John McEuroe lungs ahead to reach the ball during his match against Bjorn Borg in the U.S. Open Championships final. McEuroe won the title at 4-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Essex Player champs

LONDON, Sept. 14 (AP) — Cavalier batting by West Indians Norbert Phillip and Viv Richards gave Essex the John Player League Championship Sunday.

Phillip cracked an unbeaten 80 to send Essex on its way to the victory it needed against Surrey at the Oval, and Richards scored a magnificent 101 at Taunton to snuff out Warwickshire's title challenge and send Somerset into the runner-up spot.

Phillip hammered five sixes in the last two overs of the Essex innings, which ended in confusion.

The game had been reduced to 39 overs a side because of a five-minute hold-up for rain at the start, and after 38 overs the teams went off because it was the stipulated time for the tea interval with Essex 184 for six.

The ground staff was on the pitch with the roller when umpires Bob Hermand and Derek Shackleton ruled that because there had been no further rain, the agreed 39 overs had to be completed. The extra over was worth 19, runs to Essex, which eventually won the game by 21.

After Surrey had started with an opening stand of 40, three wickets fell for the addition of eight, and despite a fine unbeaten 60 by Graham Roope, batting in extremely poor light, Essex never looked like losing.

Richards needed only 59 balls to lash the century that crushed Warwickshire's title bid. He hit six sixes and eight fours, reaching 50 in 33 deliveries and 101 in 26 more. Somerset has now finished in the top two in the league in four consecutive seasons, winning it in 1070

Although a rain delay restricted the game to 28 overs each, Somerset still ran up 211 for six and Warwickshire's tough task became more daunting when they lost four wickets for 50

Phil Oliver offered stern resistance with 55 in 11 overs, but Joel Garner and Hallam Moseley took three wickets apiece, and Somerset coasted home.

Meanwhile, Derbyshire, the Nat West Trophy winners, completed a fine season of one-day cricket by finishing fourth in the Player League after a six-wicket win in a rain-affected game against Middlesex at Donbar.

Middlescx were unable to make the most of a spirited 218 for seven, in which Graham Barlow cracked 71 and Roland Butcher 66. Rain reduced Derbyshire's target to a more modest 138 in 24 overs, and they reached it with 14 balls to spare, John Wright hititing 64 not out.

Northamptonshire, sixtl last year, were doomed to bottom place when David Turner hit an unbeaten 82 to steer Hampshire to a six-wicket win at Southampton.

Nottinghamshire's Mike Bore conceded only seven runs in his eight overs in the seven-wicket defeat of Glamorgan at Trent Bridge.

The bidding:

10 Pass 1 •

Here is a well-bid hand where South opened one heart and North responded one spade. South's raise to four spades indicated a willingness to play for game even though the spade response might have been based on only 6 points. By inference, therefore, the spade raise showed about 20 points, counting distribution also.

North immediately recognized that there were hig doings in store, since he had an opening bid of his own as well as a guaranteed fit in both his long suits. Accordingly, he bid four notrump.

South responded five spades, showing three aces, and North asked for kings by bidding five notrump. When South showed one king by responding six diamonds, North was faced with an important decision. He knew that South had four spades and at least five hearts, since South had bid hearts first. In addition, it seemed highly likely that South had the king of spades, and probably the queen as well, though he could not feel certain of either or both. North concluded that the chance of making a grand slam ranged anywhere from a dead certainty to a finesse at worst, thus making it a worthwhile proposition. He therefore decided to go all the

The only question to resolve was whether to play the grand slam in spades or hearts. Quite properly, North chose hearts. His singleton club was likely to be much more valuable with hearts as trump than spades, and in addition his fifth spade was likely to provide a useful discard for South. Accordingly he bid seven hearts, which was easily made. Seven spades could not have been made, but seven hearts was virtually laydown.

U.N. votes boycott of South Africa on Namibia freedom

UNITED NATIONS, Sept. 14 (AP) -The U.N. General Assembly voted 117-0 to call for a general boycott of South Africa to force that country out of Southwest Africa, or Namibia. Twenty-five countries abstained.

They included the five Western countries that drafted a pending U.N. plan to bring Southwest Africa to independence: The United States, Britain, France, West Germany and Canada. The vote dimaxed an emergency special session on Namibia, which Koho Reid Morden of Canada told the General Assembly that the five countries, making up the so-called Western contact group, had abstained because of their mediating efforts in the dispute. He said negotiations on the matter had reached a "crucial stage" and "we do not wish to have it complicated by taking a position on the substance of the resolution." He added that the objective of the five remained - the finding of a "peaceful, internationally acceptable solution" of the Namibian problem. He said they believed the

S.Africa said pillaging Angola areas

LISBON, Sept. 14 (R) — The Angolan Army commander of the war front town of Cahama has accused South African forces of pillaging southern Angola of all livestock and machinery and said they showed no signs of withdrawing. Maj. Farrusco told Luanda's official daily newspaper, the Jornal de Angola, that South Africa had concentrated its motorized forces near Cataquero, about 100 kms north of the border with Namibia (Southwest Africa).

The Angolan news agency Angop, which carried the interview Monday, reported Maj. Farrusco said that some South African rearguard units may have pulled back into Namibia. Their task was to evacuate the vast quantities of goods and equipment which Pretoria was pillaging from the occupied zone, he said, according to Angop's telexed message to Reuters.

"We know that they are taking everything from farm tractors, bulldozers and civil transport vehicles to cattle into Namibia, in fact all the technical means necessary for the reconstruction of our country," the major

Angola's Marxist government has said repeatedly that Pretoria's large-scale incursion three weeks ago was aimed at creating a buffer zone with South African-ruled Namibia. South Africa says the operation was launched to attack guerrillas of the Southwest Africa People's Organization (SWAPO), which has been fighting a 15-year bush war for the independence of Namibia. Angola is SWAPO's main backer.

Maj. Farrusco said the South African Motorized forces at Cataquero were equipped with armored cars, Centurion tanks, transport vehicles, fuel tankers and other vehicles for logistical support.

Morden also said the five were against the Assembly's arrogating to itself powers that rightly belong to the Security Council. The boycott called for in the Assembly resolution, he declared, imposes "no legal obligation" on U.N. member states.

The U.N. Charter reserves to the Security Council the authority to impose sanctions that is to order a general diplomatic, economic and communications boycott against any country it finds to be breaching or threatening peace. The Assembly can do no more than recommend such action.

Nevertheless, the resolution "calls upon all states, in view of the threat to international peace and security posed by South Africa, to impose against that country comprehensive mandatory sanctions in accordance with provisions of the charter."

Just after that, it "also strongly urges states to cease forthwith, individually and collectively, all dealings with South Africa in order totally to isolate it politically, economically, nilitarily and culturally."

And just before the provision calling on states to impose sanctions, the resolution "strongly arges the Security Council, in the light of the serious threat to international peace and security posed by South Africa, to respond positively to the overwhelming demand of the international community by immediately imposing against that country comprehensive mandatory sanctions as provided for' in chapter seven of the U.N. Char-

The U.N. Council for Namibia was requested to monitor the boycott and bring to the Assembly's attention instances of contacts between U.N. member states and South

The African states also wished to demonstrate their impatience with the Western contact group that has been trying to secure South Africa's conpliance with a Namibia independence plan they drafted in 1978 and which was endorsed that year by the Security Council.

South Africa has so far balked at implementing the plan, embodied in Council resolution 435, which calls for a large U.N. military and civilian presence in the territory to maintain order and supervise elections. Pretoria says the U.N. is biased in favor of the Southwest Africa people's Organization (SWAPO), which is waging a guerrilla war against South African rule in Namibia. In Monday's resolution the Assembly reaffirmed its support for SWAPO as 'the sole and authentic representative of the Namibian people," and for its "armed struggle to achieve self-determination freedom and national independence."

The Western contact group has been working on new proposals designed to overcome South African objections to the U.N.-backed independence plan. They are expected to be made public soon after their foreign ministers met in New York on Sept. 24.

Some African and other delegates voiced suspicions during the Assembly debate that the Western group might be planning changes in the original plan.

Sonoda to plead for N-arms cut

TOKYO, Sept. 14 (AFP) - Japanese Foreign Minister Sunao Sonoda said Monday he will urge the United States and the Soviet Union to cut down gradually their nuclear and conventional arms, including neutron bombs, when he speaks at the United Nations

General Assembly on Sept. 22. Sonoda, in an interview with Kyodo News Service, also said enormous money could be saved through disarmament and be used to promote international cultural interchanges and settle the North-South problem of economic disparities between the rich and poor countries and other economic difficul-

Sonoda said that, in a meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in New York, he will propose to discuss improvement of Japan-Soviet relations including the occupation of the Japanese-claimed southern Kuril Islands by the Soviet Union.

France not to abandon neutron effort

PARIS, Sept. 14 (Agencies) — Premier Pierre Mauroy said Monday it would not be wise for France to abandon efforts to develop its own neutron warhead.

In a speech to the opening of a higher institute for national defense, Mauroy said the warhead was a tactical weapon "which can increase our deterrent potential. This capability remains to be developed and that's why the government has decided to continue studying" the project.

Mauroy said: "The United States has just decided to equip itself with enhanced radiation weapons and the Soviet Union has stated it is perfectly capable of producing such weapons. We must bear these facts in Mauroy added the neutron warhead, which kills tank crews and other enemy forces with high radiation but leaves property intact, can be part of a threat extended to a Western European battlefield." "As far as France is concerned, it would not be rational to give up the acquisition of an armament which could increase our deterrent force."

France tested a neutron warhead in June 1980 but has not yet decided whether to add

Third World hails unity at Paris talks

PARIS, Sept. 14 (AFP) - Some Third World leaders claimed a victory in the way the 122 countries in the so-called "Group of 77" stuck together before and during the first-ever United Nations conference on the world's poorest nations.

"The cohesiveness of the Group of 77 has been a miracle," a member of the Bangladesh delegation said, speaking of the politics, not the decisions, of the meeting. "Nobody expects 122 countries to agree all the time, especially countries that are so mixed geographically, economically, politically and socially," the delegate said. "But the group has held together as one body," he said.

"The group is solid," an Indian delegate declared. The group encompasses some of Kuwait, as the least developed countries ((LDCs), whose future prospects were being decided at the meeting.

Despite the enormous potential for friction among group members, no open disputes ever surfaced at the two-week conference.

The nearest indication of a ric occurred Monday when the African countries, representing 21 of the 31 LDCs, said they would issue a separate statement, saying that the conference is not a failure but it did not go as far as they had hoped.

Some "Group of 77" countries, which did not want to be identified, also charged industrialized countries with trying to split the organization by trying to speak separately with the 31 LDCs at pre-conference meetings. But aid experts for the Western nations denied such charges, saying it was an old complaint from the group.

It would have been far more efficient and effective to have dealt directly with the LDCs than the group as a whole, a top aid official of the 24-nation Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development said.

However, the group said they saw the matter in a radically different light. A key concern was that stepped up aid to the LDCs could cut into aid to developing nations if the overall amount of development assistance was not increased at the same time, group delegates said. "That is why we had to hang togethert and negotiate as a group," one delegate from a "Group of 77" country said.

India, for instance, now has an average annual per capita income of $180, whereas people living in the LDCs have $183. In terms of the other U.N. criteria for officially qualifying as an LDC, India has a marginally higher literacy rate than the about 20 percent for the LDCs and India's industry contributes a marginally higher percentage to the country's gross domestic product.

The conference was a step toward a new international economic order, French Cooperation and Development Minister Jean-Pierre Cot said Monday.

Speaking as the conference president. Cot said: "I believe that Paris will have marked, beyond the problems of the LDCs, a new concrete awarness of the challenge that underdevelopment represents and the political will to progress toward a new, more just and more equitable international economic order."

Cot said that the countries had reaffirmed commitments on their overall aid despite individual budgetary problems. Those commitments would appear "modest" he said, adding the conference obviously could not solve the "immense difficulties and the profound economic and social distress" facing

Speaking about the conference's "new substantial program of action" for the LDCs in the 1980s, Cot said that the meeting had also shown international goodwill to "par-ticipate actively in the solution" of these problems. The program also provides for a followup mechanism that will make sure that LDC problems will not be lost from sight, he

Several hundred and-nuclear demonstrators had to be held back at the base's main entrance by a cordon of military police during a ceremony attended by top NATO military officials. In another demonstration Sunday by opponents of U.S. defense policies and the deployment of nuclear weapons in Western Europe,50 persons delayed a British imop column heading for the maneuvers.

They sat on a bridge between the Danish mainland and Pyn island until police gave them a 15-minute ultimatum. Monday's ceremony, the first to be held outside the central European sector since the mancuvers started in 1975, was attended by Danish Octobse Minister Pool Sognard and British Gen.
